Mr. and Mrs. Jenness will make their home in Lowell, Mass., to which place they will go this week. Congratulations.

Mr. H. T. Seaver and C. E. Hamblet have taken the agency for the Crocker waste heat radiator for the state of Vermont. This radiator is connected directly with the smoke pipe from the furnace or stove and makes use of the heat which would otherwise pass up the chimney. Mr. Seaver placed one of these radiators in the Barton bank last winter where it worked very well, giving excellent satisfaction. Since that time he has placed several in this village all of which have proven satisfactory in every way.

The annual excursion to Boston will be made over the Boston & Maine road next Thursday. The tickets are good to return until Oct. 28th. This is a grand chance to visit the metropolis of New England and all who can should take advantage of it. The Food Fair under the auspices of the Boston Retail Grocers Association is now in session. This is the most extensive exposition of food products ever held in New England. In addition to the exhibit of foods there will be a wonderful electrical display and some of the most famous bands in America, and the Royal Marine Band of Italy, will furnish music. All who visit Boston should attend the food fair.

There came near being a serious fire at Wm. Brown's last week. It appears that John Murphy who has been boarding at Mr. Brown's sleeps in a room which has two beds. A few nights ago he disrobed and put his coat and vest on the bed he does not occupy. Sometime in the night he awoke and was unable to rise on account of being so nearly smothered with smoke. He called Mr. Brown who came to the top of the stairs in a hurry. He found the bed on which Murphy had laid his clothes all on fire. The bed was burned through. William started for the stairs and landed at the bottom at one stride. He brought water and put out the fire. The window being up was what saved Murphy from suffocation. The cause of the fire was a pipe with tobacco on fire in Murphy's pocket.

The C. E. convention held at Newport Friday afternoon and evening was a most interesting occasion. The main interest centered in the address of Rev. F. E. Clark the originator of the great society. He spoke of his pleasure in coming to Newport as he stopped here on his wedding journey. At 10:00 p. m. Thursday night he left Keene, N. H., where a convention was being held, and they sang, "There Is Sunshine in My Soul," and when he arrived at Newport at 4:30 a. m., he was met at the depot by a number singing the same song. He stated that there were 62,000 societies and nearly 4,000,000 members belonging to these C. E. societies. There was not an hour of the day but a C. E. meeting was being held, for the society girdled the globe. He referred to his visit to China just before the Boxer rebellion and the spiritual preparation which Christians received from God to enable them to meet the trying times which followed. The meeting was a grand inspiring one, one to be remembered by those who attended.

The death of Captain Silas B. Tucker on Monday the 7th removes one of our citizens, who for many years was a very prominent figure in the affairs of this village. Mr. Tucker was born in Thornton, N. H., in December 1832. Later his parents moved to Tunbridge in this state and still later to Northfield. Here Mr. Tucker worked at his trade, that of painter, for the Central Vermont R. R. Co. When the war of the Rebellion broke out he enlisted on the 9th day of May, 1861, among the three months men whom President Lincoln first called into the field. When his time was up he enlisted for three years. He joined the eleventh Vt. regiment. He was at first made an uncommissioned officer, but by his military bearing and courage he was promoted to second lieutenant, and later after distinguishing himself he received another promotion to first lieutenant, and still later by gallant conduct to that of captain of Company C. Ever performing his duty at the front, he was severely wounded in the shoulder in the battle of Opequon where the eleventh regiment of Vt. Vols. lost seven killed and eighty-five wounded. This was fought on the 19th of May, 1864, and the wound always troubled Mr. Tucker while he lived. Soon after the war he came here and bought the Wilder C. Parker farm where he lived for several years. He followed his trade as a painter to some extent and executed some fine oil paintings. For two years he was on the road as advance agent for the Beadle troupe. He organized the first brass band in this village, contributing largely for the uniforms and was elected drum major and drilled them in military tactics to some extent. He was also the promoter of the dramatic club called the Thespians, which was noted for the excellence of their acting, and the large houses which their plays brought together. For the last fifteen years Mr. Tucker's health has been such he had not been able to do much work and but little public business. Three years ago he had a shock which disabled him for a long time; but later he rallied sufficiently to enable him to supervise the building of his new house. One year ago he was attacked with another shock and since that time he had failed until his death ensued. The funeral was largely attended on Wednesday, the 9th inst., at his residence. A number of old soldiers were present, and the W. R. C. contributed some beautiful flowers for the occasion. Rev. J. B. Lyman officiated as clergyman making some very fitting remarks. Captain Tucker leaves a wife, who has faithfully cared for him during his long illness, and a sister, Mrs. Almira Copp, of Vineland, N. J., besides many friends and more distant relatives to mourn his loss.
